5. AI FORENSIC RECONSTRUCTION & HYPOTHESIS EVALUATION

Primary Probable Hypothesis:
Aggravated Armed Commercial Robbery: Suspect entered premises with a concealed semi-automatic firearm, immediately established lethal dominance over store clerk, intentionally discharged one round into store fixtures to enforce compliance, extracted cash proceeds from till, and executed pre-planned vehicular egress in under 24 seconds.

Alternative Secondary Hypothesis:
Accidental Weapon Discharge during Armed Holdup: Suspect experienced involuntary trigger squeeze under high sympathetic muscle tension while reaching for cash drawer, causing accidental discharge into back counter.

Evidentiary Inconsistencies & Counter-Theories:
Ballistic angle (12° upward) and shell casing ejection trajectory support an intimidation warning shot rather than direct lethal intent toward the clerk's torso.

6. ACTIONABLE INVESTIGATIVE LEADS

Lead #1: Recover spent 9mm bullet core embedded in rear merchandise rack shelf #3.

Lead #2: Extract latent epidermal DNA and friction ridge prints from cash register drawer rim touched at 00:14.16.

Lead #3: Request ALPR records for Metro Blvd intersection between 23:14 and 23:25 for getaway vehicle identification.

Lead #4: Canvass area pawn shops and black-market currency fencing networks for stamped store deposit bills.
